Your Wartime Christmas Gifts

THIS year we should select our Christmas gifts with care greater than ever before. The war lays upon us all the duty of discarding the pincushion, spotted-necktie sort of gifts and of choosing instead gifts which are practical—useful—helpful.

THE FINE ARTS JOURNAL

makes an intensely practical, useful, helpful — yet highly pleasing gift.

Moreover, by choosing this gift, you save yourself the time, worry and rush of Christmas shopping. To do it all, you have merely to sit quietly at your desk and order one subscription for each name on your Christmas list.

Last year a thousand people solved the gift problem in this the sensible way. You cannot do better than follow their lead.

SPECIAL:

"The Luxembourg Museum and Its Treasures" or "The Master Impressionists" and "Fine Arts Journal" together.....$8.00

Just list your friends, and send their names, address, with the correct remittance to the address below, and your Christmas shopping" is done.

FAMILY TREASURES SILVERWARE

SILVERWARE may be a luxurious necessity but it is practically indispensable and economically practical.

Good silverware will render service through many lifetimes.

Next to the family jewels, articles of silver are the most prized heirlooms.

The silver purchased to-day will be treasured as the Family Silver by future generations.

The dominant idea back of the silverware which we offer is that it shall possess all those essentials which make it good to-day and insure its being cherished to-morrow for something more than sentiment.

It will cost you less to-day than was paid for the silver which has been handed down to you and it is much better made and finished.

AMERICA'S LEADING ART PUBLICATION

¶ No increase in price, although the high-grade paper on which it is printed, known as Warren's Silkote Enamel, has more than doubled in value since the opening of the 1916 subscription season.

¶ The subscriber will receive in each issue, eighty pages of interesting text in which are from fifty to eighty beautiful illustrations.

¶ Its contents include timely articles on the current art topics of the day; authoritative articles on the fine and decorative arts, home building and adornment.

¶ It is a magazine for the Art Lover, the Artist, the Art Student, the Picture Buyer, the Club Woman—in fact, everyone desirous of keeping in touch with all that is transpiring in the Art World.
